I can't be outside in Somerville for five minutes without seeing a car blow through a red light, blow through a crosswalk, park in a bike lane (or sidewalk!) or see a driver playing with their phone while they're driving. And yet, the only time I see a Somerville police officer, they're standing around watching a construction site - which leads me to wonder why we have such a large taxpayer-funded police department. I assume I'm missing something because nobody seems eager to challenge this status quo, but I would love to know what it is I'm missing. Thank you for listening.
