ALA American Library Association

May 27, 2013

Dear colleague:

Congratulations again on your successful Let's Talk About It (LTAI): Muslim Journeys proposal! Enclosed is your institution's grant payment. As you know, these funds may be used to purchase multiple copies of the five Muslim Journeys books that fall under your institution's selected theme.

Baker & Taylor is offering all participating libraries and state humanities councils discounted pricing on orders of the Muslim Journeys books. Most titles in the collection will be available at 40% off the publisher's list price if purchased through Baker & Taylor. A list of pricing information, by title, is provided with the enclosed order form.

As of May 2013, there are limited quantities in stock of many of the Muslim Journeys titles. Therefore, ALA is urging all grant recipients to order their print materials as soon as possible. This way, if a reprint is necessary, there will be ample time for your materials to arrive before programs begin.

If you would like to order your books through B&T, please use the attached order form and contact LTAI Grant project coordinator Ann Louise Reuben, at Baker & Taylor (1.800.775.1500, ext 7274 or reubena@baker-taylor.com). Use of the attached order form will ensure that you receive the negotiated discounts for this special purchase. Note that your total order must meet a minimum quantity of 25 total units to be eligible for the LTAI discounts. You are in no way required to purchase your books through any particular vendor.

Finally, if your library will present programs on the American Stories theme, please know that beginning on September 1st, the recommended readings from The Columbia Sourcebook of Muslims in the United States will be posted on ALA's website, as a password protected PDF. Your library will have permission to print and distribute copies of these readings to your LTAI program attendees. More details will be provided at the Chicago and Denver workshops, but we thought you should have this information before you place your order for books.

All the best for your upcoming programs!
